Doan's Kidney Pills, A Modern Medicine for Every Kidney Ill.

Mr. T. H. Hughes, of Saxtons River, Vt., employed by B. F. Locke & Co., says: "My kidneys did not act properly for years, and I gradually grew on me. For two or three years they troubled me very much with a dull, aching pain across my back and in my joints. If I stood on my feet for any length of time, I felt the pain across my back more and my legs became numb. When the pain in my back got so bad that I could stand it no longer, I put on plaster, and I used a great many of them, but they only afforded me temporary relief. I also used medicines of all kinds, but they did not reach the cause. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and so well recommended, that I was induced to give them a trial, and I got them at Andrew's drug store. They gave me immediate relief. After the treatment I seldom felt any symptoms of my former troubles, but when I did I took a few of Doan's Kidney Pills and it soon left me. My rheumatic pains were not so severe, and I did not have that tired, languid feeling. I had more energy in doing my work and gave all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me a great deal of good, and I feel justified in recommending them to others as a good and reliable medicine." Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all druggists 50 cents per box. At last she spoke demurely: "And of what else were you thinking, monsieur?"

"I was thinking what you are most like. Some ladies are like snow mountains that stand very far off, white and beautiful, but cold—so cold you cannot warm them, and so high. Some are like blossoms, sweet and perfumed, made for only a nosegay in the evening. When the sun is hot they wither. Some are like a song that one hears and thinks lovely—hums it awhile and forgets."

"And which of these am I, sir?" "You are like a sword—slim and shining and straight and yet delicate. It took centuries to make the sword, mademoiselle. It will bend, bend, but not break. It is sharp and cold to all the world save one—the one who wears it at his side. But to his touch it becomes alive to ward him harm, to guard his life, to keep his honor."

"An we were truly swords," she flashed, "we ladies of Virginia, there were less of bitterness in this fair colony of ours."

"So the sword has the temper?" he cried, his eyes kindling. "It is not for ornament alone! And these troubles of the colonies—they strike so deeply then? Do even the ladies of a land such as this feel the sting?"

She gazed out toward the low knobbed hills lined against the deepening sky, her elbow on the window sill, her chin in her gloved hand, silent. Above them in sun stained air shreds of torn clouds folded away like dreams. From near by came the startled flutter of field larks and the rustle of ripening corn.

The road curved quickly and lurched into a pine forest, where the day flamed to twilight and the hoots fell noiselessly into a carpet of brown needles. It was a pleasant way, full of mingled odors, all strangely pure and agreeable, where clamorous wood things piped to a musical silence.

"Tis not all Virginia, after all, that one sees here, monsieur," she said slowly after a time. "Far to the west of us is a vast region, raw, full veined and of scattered tenants. There are great mountain peaks and ravines, wastes waiting seed and hoe, plateaus and woodlands where the musket and the ax are never silent. Deer run in the brake. Wolves race along the ridges. There strong men have lived and toiled and fought back the savages and cleared themselves homes. Their children have grown up, unyielding like the granite in the mountain's heart, untrammelled like its torrents. And their life amid the silences has taught them a justice that knows neither fear nor favor. The region you see here, monsieur, to this region we I speak of is but the revealed edge."

"Here broad rivers run brackish with tidewater, and ships lie at the wharfs. They bring to our manor houses all of luxury and refinement which Virginia tobacco can buy. And here the planters—for Virginia was first settled by gentlemen, monsieur—choose to put on courtliness and dress in gold lace and make a bit of London for themselves on the edge of the wilderness."

"Just beyond those hills to the southward is Williamsburg, the capital they have built. It has a college and a court. There the cocks are ever fighting, the horses are ever running, the fiddles are ever playing, and there in his palace sits the royal governor his majesty is pleased to put over his colonials, levying on their leaf and sneering at their buckskins."

"The Earl of Dunmore?" "Aye, my lord the earl. Think you he knows one white more of this Virginia than does the king, a thousand leagues away? He drinks in his palace and drives his white horses and bullies his burgesses, the representatives whom the people have elected. They must please him or he dissolves them. The king has forgotten that the Virginians are Englishmen and that Englishmen love freedom."

"And Englishwomen, too," he said. "We can do little," she went on. "We wear no swords. All we can do is to hope and to wait."

"Little!" There was a thrill in his tone. "Little! You call such a hope, such a feeling, small? You think it valueless or weak? Ah, mademoiselle, know you what makes a lady adorable to a man's heart, what makes him worship her? It is that she inspires him; that it is not to dress for her or bow or sing her little songs, but to toll, to struggle, to fight, to die maybe—something high like the stars. Man has a want for two things—a cause to fight for first, and then—then a one, a perfect one, a loved face, to wait and smile on him when he has won."

"With this a man could do miracles. Ah, it could make of a poor nobody a king, an emperor! I, even I, mademoiselle, a stranger from another land—I could fight so well for these great things, for this Virginia of yours, if I—if I!"

He paused. There was a tense moment. Then the air filled itself with a long, dull sigh, and on its train came a sudden snapping of dead boughs, an unjoined, cracking report, and both looked up startled.

A strange faraway circumstance had had part in this. Indians had not been used to fall trees as did their white conquerors. Instead they cut, deep rings into the bark and let nature be axman. These trunks fell when dry rot had done its work, sometimes in storms, often when no wind stirred, crashing in a forested silence. A quarter century before perhaps a Mattapony brave had thus girdled a great pine with his tomahawk, and it was this dead tree, its limbs now white as bleached wolf bones, which was now, after its time, leaning to its fall from the roadside.

A shriek burst from Anne's lips as she saw the toppling bulk through the window, and she started to her feet. Simultaneously came a howl of terror from Rashleigh and a leaping jerk from the horses as he tried to lash them to safety.

There was an instant when the huge bole seemed to hang motionless in the air above them, an instant in which Anne frenziedly wrenched open the door and made as if to leap out. The same instant Armand seized her, dragged her back and threw himself and her against the rear wall of the chariot.

She struggled, but he forced her back and held her as the groaning mass came to earth with a crash that rocked the ground.

Anne, conscious even in her ecstasy of fright of a sense of safety in his arms, felt the body of the coach crush like an eggshell. She had hidden her face on his breast and shut her eyes, waiting the end. The whole world was a splinter of glass, a ripping of boarding, a sickening jumble of thuds, through which stabbed the agonized squeals of the horses.

Then there was stillness, broken by Rashleigh's sobbing scream: "De good Lawd, Mis' Anne! De good Lawd! Is yo' daid?"

She opened her eyes and looked up. The riven trunk lay right athwart the forward cushions, where it had crashed his way through. A great, gnarled limb, broken off, thrust itself a yard from her face, and through the jagged edges of the top she saw the fair foliage swaying. Armand's face bent above her. It was white and strained with an anguish that was slipping away, but it was calm.

"Bress Gord!" he stammered, his grizzled forelock working. "Bress his name! So yo' ain' hurt, honey? Den I gwintier ketch de hosses 'fore dey scare missus to deff?"

The head withdrew, and Anne tried to smile up at Armand.

"We are safe," she said, speaking slowly, like a child. "I know. 'Twas so sudden. Let me—wait a moment." She closed her eyes again, sick and faint in the reaction.

He did not speak at once, but she felt his arms, which were under and around her, shake with a little tremor and draw her closer.

"Suppose," she breathed, her eyes still closed—"suppose it had struck nearer?"

"We should not have felt it—a quick death and merciful." She shuddered.

"They would have found us—so," he said, with an underbreath.

She lifted her head at this and started as the color coming back to her lips. "Help me out."

Stooping under the splintered door frame, he assisted her to the ground. It was a hurly of broken branches, sprangling spokes, thrusting springs and distorted fragments of wood. A snapped limb a foot in thickness lay with its end upon the bent and twisted step.

"Had I leaped it would have struck me!"

"Yes," he answered.

"So swift and terrible!" she said, her voice catching. "Like a bolt from a cloud—like the judgment. That moment—I would not live it again for worlds!"

He spoke with a flame in his cheeks. "And I—I would I might! Ah, I would endure all agonies for that moment again, that moment when—"

"Monsieur!"

He stepped at the indignation in her tone.

"Let us go," she said. "Gladden Hall is just behind these pines."

"I beg you—"

"Bethink, sir," she added coldly, "that so late as yesterday I had never seen you!"

"So late as yesterday!" he cried. "To measure all things by the hands of the clock! What has time to do with the feeling of the heart? Is death all that comes suddenly, unexpectedly? Are there no sweeter things that come as swiftly? Ah, a man can live a year in an hour, mademoiselle—a lifetime within one little day. Yesterday, you say? Mademoiselle, yesterday for me were only dim waters and gray sky; now there are flowers and birds and laughter and all glad things. Shall I tell you what has changed it all? The moment you spoke to me on the wharf, the hour we have ridden side by side along the field, most of all, mademoiselle, the moment you will not have me tell you of, that one moment I lived when death came falling out of the sky upon us, when you cried out—when—"

"Stop!" she protested, her hands to her red cheeks.

"When your face was on my shoulder—when you breathed! You clung to me—to me—you, the fairest lady God has made! My arms were around you."

"Oh!" she gasped. "No more! You have no right!"

"Right?"

"No!" she cried stormily, her breast rising and falling. "No! You presume upon a danger into which fate thrust me without my wish. Why, we have but ridden a half league. I know not even your name! Who are you to speak thus to me?"

"Who am I?" repeated the young man slowly, the rich color dying his face. "I am—only a Frenchman, mademoiselle, only a man who gazed upon your face in a crowd and whom—whom you asked to ride beside you in the coach."

His tone had fallen. "Is it his fault, mademoiselle, if his custom is not the custom of your land, if he knows not to repress, if he must say what he feels?" He finished very low. "Is it his fault that he cannot forget that your face hid itself upon his breast for one little moment here in the forest?"

She was alternately flushing and paling, and her eyes were shining. "You must not! You must not!" she cried out with softer voice.

With the words she started walking rapidly, hastening without glancing at him. The dimness of the interlaced branches overhead parted; the trees stood sparser. Just ahead a leafy arch let in the fading sunlight and a view of yellow stubble, and beyond this showed a broad gateway—twin brick pillars crested with martlets—opening on a winding road to a great house that looked a many windowed welcome.

It sat snugly in elms on a hill from whose crest a terraced lawn fell softly into the arms of the shining, twisted river—a southern home in its high days, its dairy, meat house, ice house and granaries all dazzling white against the blue and olive of sky and wood. Spacious offices stood to the left, and wide negro quarters squatted at some distance behind it. Near by a tiny creek sparkled down to wash a tangle of islands. From adjacent fields came the piping whistle of partridges in grass.

Just before the gateway the young man's voice caught her. "For the sake of that one moment, mademoiselle," he said huskily.

She paused, looked back and held out her hand. He dropped upon one knee and touched his lips to her fingers.

"I am glad I owe my life to you," she said softly.

Gazing at him uncertainly an instant, she hesitated, then turned and ran rapidly up the winding drive. Her hound lifted his shag head from the columned porch and came leaping down to meet her, while his white drew Mammy Eyeline peering from the kitchen door, her weather beaten face dilating into a smile.

"Lawd, dar come mammy's honey chile safe an' soun!" she cried to Mrs. Tillotson, who came hastily to the steps and waved her hand at the girl's fluttering signal.

"Down, Sweetlips! Down!" cried Anne as the hound leaped against her. She stopped, bethinking herself of the indenture.

She ran back to the gateway, but the young Frenchman was not to be seen. As she stood peering into the pines the breeze went playing with some torn bits of paper scattered in the ruts. She picked up several fragments and strove to decipher them. "Which term the said bond servant faithfully shall serve Armand, holder," she read.

Then she caught her breath and, forbearing to glance in the direction of the forest road, walked toward the anxious figure on the porch of the great house.

CHAPTER V. IN the Swan tavern, which lifted its yellow Holland brick front and peaked shingle roof not far from the Yorktown river front, the candles had been early lighted that night. There, as day faded out, supping at his ease at a table in the long parlor, sat a man of middle age whose effrontery and insolence had long ago earned him cordial hatred throughout Williamsburg. He was Captain Foy, aid to Governor Dunmore.

He looked up as another guest entered and dropped his knife clattering. "Jarrat!" he cried. "I thought you were in London!"

"So I was; so I was, but I am returned today," Jarrat answered easily. Continued on page 6.

Duties.
Of Life's work you can't do much, Nor can I; Just a gentle word or touch, If we try.
For no one is too small, To give a smile to all, Good and ill; And no one is too weak, A kindly word to speak, If we will.
If a fellow-creature falls, In your sight, Be not the first one who bawls, Out his pligh.
Towards a homeless, friendless dog, You need not act the "hog", But by choice.
Tho' a beggar cross your path, 'Tis no cause for insane wrath, In your voice, Comes to shame, Be the last to advertise, Her ill-fame.
If you cannot lift her higher, Do not push her in the mire, — So to speak, — For your feet will not be clean If you trample on the mire, And the weak.
If you cannot be of use, Get thee hence! For your life is an abuse, And offense.
And I tell you sure as Death, For each idle, useless breath, We must pay a heavy price In toil and sacrifice, 'Tis the law, CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Hall's Catarrh Remedy is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in its efforts. Mrs. Mary Gray has returned to her home in Conway, after spending the winter with her niece, Mrs. Will Gain.

Grand Trunk at World's Fair.
The extensive and comprehensive exhibit which the Grand Trunk Railway System are arranging for the World's Fair, held at St. Louis during 1904, is now in course of preparation. The proposed pavilion which it is the intention of erecting is one of combining beauty, elegance and artistic merit and the designs submitted to the Exposition authorities were greatly admired and accepted. The pavilion will be erected in the "Fish and Game" Building, facing on three aisles, will be of Cornelian and Doric architectural style, embellished with ambitious designs of fish and game, and it is claimed to be one of the handsomest structures at the Exposition. Canadian haunts will be the pre-dominating feature of the display.
The mammoth palaces that form the main picture of this "World's Fair"—the Foreign and State buildings and the "Pike" (Midway)—are at the present time much further advanced before the opening date than the buildings of any other of the great expositions that have been held in the past; in fact, the installation of exhibit is now proceeding with in many of the buildings.
One good feature of St. Louis is the Union Station; there being only this one, all trains from all points with the exception of excursion trains from a distance of one or two hundred miles of St. Louis will arrive and leave from the one depot, and as the street car lines pass the station visitors will have no trouble in reaching their hotels or boarding houses without difficulty and early after arrival.
People who have seen the grounds for the first time marvel at the magnitude of this colossal undertaking and do not hesitate in forming the opinion that it will be the greatest event from an instructive, educational and amusement point of view, that the world has ever seen.
Two hundred and fifty conventions have already signified their intention of visiting, and have completed arrangements for St. Louis during the "World's Fair."

Success, What Is It?

Who are they that have achieved it? Who shall say that A. is a failure and B. is a success; perhaps B. is the greater failure of the two when abilities and circumstances are taken into consideration. The world will measure a man by the results attained, but is the judgment always fair; by any means. Many a man has been looked up as a total failure, measured by what can be seen, when if all could be known he would have been hailed as the hero, who falls as the soldier in the first assault, as some must. Life is a battle that must be fought by every one, none escape. Some carry the burden easy; some get through by hard work; some are unable to get there however hard they try. These are not failures, whatever the results.

The only failure is the one who will not try, who is not willing to pick up his load and start up the hill. The fact of any one not being obliged to work for a living, because some one has worked for them in the past, does not free them from the liability.

The more leisure, the more money, the more talents possessed, the greater failure if the most is not made of them.

No one would match a burro against a thoroughbred in a race, or blame the little fellow because he could not win. Then why blame those men and call them failures, who are no better equipped for the race of life.

All any one can do is their best, and keep on trying. Dark days will come, troubles arise, courage fail for a time, but if the mind is right these troubles will pass. They will leave their traces, some of which can never be effaced, but as long as we keep at the task that has fallen to our lot, striving to the best of our abilities, there is no such thing as failure.

Keep a clean mind, wrong no man intentionally, help those who need, and leave success to take care of itself. ***

THE MEMORANDUM HABIT.

Having the Ghost of Forgotten Things—Method in the Day's Rush.

The "complexities of modern life" has become a stock phrase with writers and speakers, but no other words have so expressively described the mad rush to and fro from duty to pleasure which characterizes the daily life of the majority. In woman's realm especially this intermingling of work and play means a continuous network of marketing and morning call, visits to the dentist and the dressmaker, hunting up a music teacher for Maude and writing an acceptance to the Grundy's dinner invitation, with a charity meeting and two afternoon teas to attend before it is time to return home and dress hurriedly for dinner.

Sometimes it all goes through successfully only to be spoiled by a tiny white button, or, rather, the lack of a stitch taken in time. More often really important matters are forgotten at the proper time only to be remembered at the most inopportune period, while the sins of social omission cause many a bad quarter of an hour to the busy woman. That she finally succumbs to nervous prostration is no wonder, but it is not work which causes the final blow so much as worry. Between the desire to eliminate some of the non-essentials and the constant efforts of recollecting the multifarious engagements life is one long struggle after the unattainable.

PICTORIAL PUZZLE.

WHAT UNION GENERAL IS REPRESENTED?

A simple device and some will power in the beginning are really all that is necessary to slay the ghost of forgotten things. Look at man, staking through life serenely, and take pattern. The consciousness of a notebook to remind him of things to be done and the time of doing gives him a sense of reserve force which is not possessed by his better half.

This effectual device may be called the memorandum habit and is simply a question of pockets and persistence. A place in which to carry the notebook and the art of continually using it are all that is required. No more good brain matter wandering aimlessly through space hunting for the lost idea, no more time wasted seeking for "who," "which" and "where." The morning and street dresses can easily be fitted with pockets, while with reception and dinner gowns a chateleine may be worn which will serve to note whatever is necessary.

A little practice will enable one to acquire the habit of noting every item and then glancing occasionally over the various lists. The material things will have been relegated to their proper place, not allowed to consume more than their share of the busy woman's time and thought. Then, if the rush of life be maddening, there will at least be method in the madness.—Table Talk.

When to Rest.

It is the besetting weakness of womankind, and particularly of American womankind, to "keep going," as the phrase runs, just as long as the bodily strength will permit and long after the common sense limit of endurance has been passed. Doctors and nerve specialists in particular admit that a very large proportion of their patients, and by far the most hopeless ones, are women who, worn almost to extinction in the social treadmill, have nevertheless declined to heed nature's ominous warnings and so have finally been compelled to yield supremacy to that ogre of modern times—nervous prostration. Society women, however, are not the only victims, for there are many to be found among the ranks of the toilers and the housewives, and these are in the most pitiable case of all, for the reason that circumstances often will not permit them to rest when they would.—Exchange.

St. Valentine Fun.

A game of cards most appropriate for St. Valentine's day is hearts and should be played by an even number and with partners. A unique way of choosing partners is to get large candy hearts, the peppermint and checkerberry candies that every one has loved in childhood. On each of these paste a strip of paper on which is written the name of one of the famous lovers of story. Romeo will play with Juliet, Francesca with Paolo, Dante with Beatrice and so on. Distribute these "sweethearts," with the request that the soul mate of each be found, and for prizes give an embroidered heart shaped dolly and an embroidered broom case, heart shaped also.

After Dinner Cheese.

After dinner cheeses are usually what are called strong varieties—that is, those in which putrefactive processes have begun. The best known and most frequently used are stilton, roquefort, brie, camembert and gorgonzola. Any one of these varieties may be used with propriety, according to individual taste. Thick water biscuits are usually served with an after dinner cheese.

Wrappers for Steel or Silver.

Pieces of silver that are seldom used should be wrapped in cotton (canton flannel) cases, never in flannel or other woollens, because they cause it to tarnish. The same may be applied to steel knife blades. Woollens cause them to rust probably by absorbing moisture. A very simple but serviceable knife case is shown in the diagram from the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Going West.

Extract from a letter received from a lady visiting her niece, Mrs. Charles Plummer, Idaho Springs, Colo.

"I left Boston, Feb. 23, and reached Chicago, Wednesday, Feb. 27. Met some friends there and came on with them. We left Chicago at 5 p. m., Wednesday, and arrived in Denver at 6.45 Thursday. Spent the night there.

Friday morning we took a car and rode about the city, visiting some of the stores. I cannot begin to tell you what a beautiful city Denver is.

We came up here, thirty-seven miles, in the afternoon. I cannot describe nor can you imagine the journey up the mountain, the short turns and curves where we could see the cars and engine in front of us. Perhaps you think you have seen mountains. I never did till I came out here.

We left Boston in zero weather. When we reached Lincoln, Nebraska, Thursday forenoon, there was no snow to be seen, and so warm we sat in observation cars with the door open and without our wraps. At Denver it was like summer. The ladies in the car did not have on outside garments and we were melted with so many clothes.

Since we arrived here the weather has been cooler. Sometimes it snows on the range when the sun shines here. It snows to day but melts as fast as it falls, March 31. There has not been a day yet we would call bad.

There are hot springs here and I walk out every day and drink the water. There is nothing the matter with me but it is the thing to drink the water. Mrs. Plummer's friends have called on me and given tea parties and we have had parties in return. I like the people here and am enjoying my visit.

As I am only used to Smith, Jones and Brown some of the names here are jaw-breakers."

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

CO-OPERATION IN EGGS.

Farmers' Syndicates Raise the Price of Eggs in Germany.

The sale of eggs in combination began in the province of Hanover, Germany, in 1896, and at present there are in that province ninety-five associations for that purpose. Of these thirty-five operate on their own account, and the remainder are allied with other associations—friendly societies, co-operative dairies or agricultural societies. The business of one of these associations amounts to nearly $20,000 a year, but that of the majority of them does not exceed $2,500, and the transactions of a considerable number fall below $1,000 a year.

A part of the eggs thus sold are disposed of to retail dealers, but by far the greater part are sold at wholesale, transportation being effected by rail. It was at first hoped that a considerable part of the sales would be made direct to the consumers through the aid of the parcels post, but the eggs thus sold scarcely amount to 5 per cent of the total quantity disposed of.

The Hanover chamber of agriculture takes an active interest in the business of these syndicates and prescribes a special mark for such of them as agree to certain conditions of sale laid down by it, having for their object to secure the freshness of the eggs sold. A large number of the associations pay the producers according to the weight of the eggs furnished in order to secure themselves against the delivery of eggs of too small size, and some of them have established a minimum weight, below which eggs are not accepted.

The eggs are packed in wooden boxes, within which the space is divided into compartments of cardboard. Since the associations were first organized the average price of eggs in the rural districts from which they are drawn is said to have increased by about one-quarter of a cent per egg.—Crop Reporter.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

Robbed at Boston.
Oliver C. Buck went to Boston last week for employment. He went on the Portland steamer and shortly before leaving the steamer he made the acquaintance of a man whom he describes as a smooth faced man of perhaps 30 years, dressed in the latest fashion, who said his name was Johnson and that he ran a hotel in Gardiner. He offered to engage Buck as help in the hotel and suggested that he return to that city with him.

Johnson told Buck to let him have his check and he would have the baggage rechecked to Portland and then they would go up town and have some breakfast. The man disappeared with the check, but returned in a few moments with the check which he turned over to Buck. They then went up town to a hotel and had something to eat.

After the breakfast Johnson left the hotel, leaving two rings on the dresser which he told Buck to care for until his return. An hour or more passed and Buck woke up to the fact that he had been swindled. He returned to the steamer landing to get his valise, taking the two rings with him. He got his valise, but the money, about $20, was gone and the rings were worthless. He was given transportation on the boat back to Portland.

Wm. M. Thurston.

Sudden Death of a Venerable and Highly Respected Citizen of Errol, N. H.

The community were startled and saddened Sunday a. m., March 27, on receiving intelligence that William M. Thurston had passed away. He had been ill with la grippe about three weeks previous, and had very nearly recovered his former health to all appearances. His death was caused by a hemorrhage of the stomach, and was instantaneous. The deceased was the son of Moses and Phebe (Forrest) Thurston; and was born in Eaton, N. H., Feb. 15, 1832. His early life until twelve years of age was spent in his paternal home in Eaton. His father then moved to Errol, which was that time almost a wilderness, containing only a few log houses.

The subject of our sketch was united in marriage with Emma Rose of Bethel on Dec. 17, 1857, making them a home on Errol Hill, where he owned a valuable farm and had just completed a new house for his bride. Eight children, two daughters and six sons, were born to them and grew to adult age. One son passed away at the age of 22. The rest of his children all have lovely homes in the immediate vicinity except one son, Forrest D., who with his wife lives in Norway with her mother to care for and comfort her.

In later years Mr. Thurston built another new grand two-story house near the old site, where one has a lovely view of Umbagog lake, Mataluk island, (where the famous Dutton cottage is located), Upton and the surrounding country, making one of the prettiest of country homes with all modern improvements in the buildings, making them very commodious.

Besides being a successful farmer and progressive citizen, he has been an influential business man, holding office in his town for several years and also representing his town in the legislature. He has been a man highly respected by all who knew him. He was a most generous friend, a genial companion, and always sympathetic in the troubles and sorrows of all, bearing his own share of the same with fortitude and courage. He was a man of keen intelligence, rare good judgment and a moral character above reproach.

In this departure his townsmen lose a good citizen and neighbor, and his family a kind and indulgent husband and father, and his sister a loyal affectionate brother.

He leaves a widow, seven children, several grandchildren and one sister, who resides in Kansas. Their loss is his gain, and may we all be helped to say, "Not my will, O Lord, but thine be done."

The heartbroken family have the deepest sympathy of all.

The funeral services were held at the Congregational church in Errol, Tuesday, Mar. 29, at 10.30 a. m. A large representation of the friends of the deceased was in attendance during the sad traveling. The floral tributes were in abundance.

Rev. Mr. Gleason of Colebrook was the officiating clergyman, who spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family, and undertaker Pease of Colebrook was in charge.

The bearers were firm and life long friends and were John Akers, Frank Allen, Jacob Corbett and Jesse Harriman. Interment was in the family lot in the cemetery at Errol village.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord."

We miss thee from our home, dear father, and miss thee from thy place. A shadow o'er our life is cast. We miss the sunshine of thy face. We miss thy kind and willing hand. Thy fond and earnest care; Our home is dark without thee, We miss thee everywhere.

Benjamin A. Upton.

Benjamin A. Upton died at his farm home at Cooperstown, Griggs Co., N. D., Sunday morning, April 3, at about 1 a. m. The cause of his death was acute tuberculosis. Mr. Upton was taken sick early in December with rheumatism and with one exception had not been out of the house after that. Several weeks ago he had pneumonia and was recovering but suffered a relapse, which ended in his death.

Mr. Upton was born in Waterford, Maine, Sept. 13, 1856, and was 49 years old last September. He has one younger sister living in Portland. He and his partner, Edward C. Butler, have been together since February, 1877, and were as two brothers. They came to Griggs county in May, 1882, and have operated their large farm together ever since. His death is a hard blow to Mr. Butler. He leaves a wife and little daughter, and multitude of friends all over Griggs county.

The funeral was from the Congregational church, Monday afternoon at 1.30. The ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Northern Light Lodge, No. 45, F. & A. M., of which he was a member. The remains were laid to rest in Cooperstown cemetery.

Hearts Courageous.

"How goes it at Williamsburg, Captain Foy? And how does Governor Dunmore with that ant hill of disloyalty?"

"He is away with the troops to quell the Indians on the Pennsylvania boundary. He will not see Williamsburg again before November. You stayed not long abroad. I heard you were gone for a year of off duty pleasuring."

"These Virginians get in the blood," Jarrot simulated a sigh. "I have lost the old land love, I fear."

He did not see fit to tell the true reason of his sea voyage or that he had been more in Paris than in London. He was a more subtle servant of Dunmore than the governor's aid, who dreamed he knew all of the great man's mind.

"What has happened since I left, captain?" he finished.

The other got up, pulled the door to carefully and came back. "Jarrot, I wonder if I shall ever see you royal governor of this colony you love so well."

"Ah," said the secretary.

Jarrot had risen with an exclamation.

"Sit down, man," said Foy. "'Ods bods! 'Tis a fair enough ambition. Why not? You are young, and you can do much yet for Lord Dunmore. The king rewards his servants. Demme, I like you the better for aiming high! Stranger things have happened. Me thinks Mistress Tillotson would not frown so upon a royal governor, eh?"

Jarrot sat down again. It is a harrowing moment when one's most secret thought is laid bare at a slash. He waited to hear what the other might say.

"Affairs are awry here," Foy continued, "and I must overtake the governor with advice. Meanwhile there is an important matter I intend to tell you. I judge I can speak plain. You may be able to assist in a delicate undertaking, and you can rest easy Dunmore will not be ungrateful, nor will the king neither."

A keenness came into Jarrot's face.

"Say on," he said.

"Very well. Here it is in a nutshell. As you perchance know, Lord Stormont in Paris has been at much pains to keep informed of the feeling in the French court. He has lately reported a growing danger. That rascally son of a tinker, Beaumarchais, whose schemes so tickled the fancy of the old king, has been buzzing about Louis XVI. to some purpose. De Vergennes, his dog of a counselor, was always itching to comfort the colonies. Well, the matter has come to a head, and France's aid is in a fair way to be pledged in the near future to the colonies. Egad, Jarrot, an the rebels' congress knew all that is in the wind at Versailles they would split themselves with joy!"

"I warrant," said the listener, non-committal.

"Louis," pursued Foy, "is pretty well assured of affairs in the north, thanks to that renegade Franklin, but as to the Virginias he is not so certain. So he is sending over one of his noble popinjays to see for him and report."

"Was rumored in Paris that the envoy was to be the Marquis de la Trousere."

"I have heard of the gentleman," said Jarrot, with careful deliberation. "Another young poppet of Marie Antoinette's, and a worse republican than Beaumarchais. And you think he will report that Virginia is ripe for insurrection?"

"Think! Why, the whole colony is a seethe of it. To be sure he will. Trust the courtier to smooth the king the way he would be smoothed."

"Where does the gentleman arrive?"

"A fortnight since word came hither by the Royal George that he was soon to take ship."

Jarrot smiled beneath his hand. Knowing himself so close to the governor's confidence, he could afford to be amused. Moreover, he had had more than one meeting while abroad with Lord Stormont in regard to this same matter. Foy's hangerman's humor, however, made him a favorite with Lord Dunmore, and it was still worth Jarrot's while to cultivate him.

"I am flattered that you confide in me," he said. "But what will you do with him when he comes? You cannot seize his person."

"Why not?" cried Foy pettishly. "There's more to his coming than that, Jarrot. He will report 'aye' to the venture of the king. Well, Louis needs no further messenger. He will straightway make the marquis his envoy. And think you the visitor need be let deliver that message? By the fiend, no! Seize his person, eh? We shall see, Jarrot! The earl knows his nuttuns. Meanwhile this marquis must be watched for. We must know

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless prompt and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives. Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave careful study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for women's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made sure that it contained the correct combination of herbs which would certainly control that dreaded disease, woman's kidney troubles.

Read What Mrs. Weisslitz Says.
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years my life was simply a burden, I suffered so with female troubles, and pains across my back and loins. The doctor told me that I had kidney troubles and prescribed for me. For three months I took his medicine, but grew steadily worse. My husband then advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought home a bottle. It is the greatest blessing ever brought to our home. With the use of this medicine, a changed woman. My pain had disappeared, my complexion became clear, my eyes bright, and my entire system in good shape."—MRS. PAULA WESSLITZ, 176 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

HEALTH In Childhood

means health in later years. As the child builds the adult shall be. Weakly neglected children do not grow to vigorous men and women. Childhood complaints yield easily to proper treatment—but they do not correct themselves. The weak stomach, pallid complexion, listless bearing, irritable temper, disturbed sleep, speak plainly of the ailments common to children, most of which have their origin in disordered stomach and bowels.

The greatest safeguard to children's health is

Dr. True's Elixir

For Indigestion, irritability, constipation, poor appetite, peevishness, fevers, stomach and liver troubles, and worms it is unequalled. Parents of two generations have relied upon it. At all druggists, 35c. Write for free booklet: "Children and Their Diseases."

Wonderful Things Near Us.
Visiting Irish Bros. mills a few days since, the die block mill where several men were busily engaged, then the saw mill where they cutting the rock maple into plank for the manufacture of die blocks, reminded me of James Russell Lowell's description of his lake adventures in his "Fireside Travels" from which I quote, "Nineteen years ago I was walking through Franconia, New Hampshire, and stopped to chat with a hermit who fed with gradual logs the unwearied teeth of a saw mill. As the panting steel slit off the slabs of the log, so did the less willing machine of talk, acquiring a staidier up-and-down motion, pare away the outward bark of conversation which protects the core, and which like the other bark has naturally most to do with the weather, the season and the heat of the day."

At length I asked him the best point of view for the Old Man of the Mountain. "Oh, that any young fellow feel or effect the Juvenalian indifference I was sincerely sorry and expressed it. The log-compelling man attempted no justification, but after a little asked, "Come from Bawson?" "Yes," (with peculiar pride) "Goodie to see in the 'city' of Bawson." "O, yes?" I said, and I thought—See Boston and die, etc. "I should like, 'awl I should like to stan' on Bunker Hill. You've been there often lately?" "N-o-o," unwillingly, seeing the little end of the horn in clear vision at the terminus of this Socratic perspective. "And my young friend, you've learned now that wit a man kin see a day for nawthin', children half price, he never does see. Nawthin' pay, nawthin' vally."
